ABOUT ALTERNATIVE EDUCATION FOUNDATION

AEF (Alternative Education Foundation) is a non-profit 501(c)3 governed by a Board of Directors. The foundation operates schools, conducts educational research, provides professional training, and hosts parent support groups. The school currently enrolls 225 children from the South Florida area affected by ADHD, Aspergers, Autism, and related social and communication deficits.

AEF was founded in 2003 by a group of parents who wanted a better education for their children. These parents had tried a variety of public and private schools, but could not find a school that catered to their child's specific needs; academics, social skills, cognitive skills, and life skills. The one-size-fits-all approach of traditional schools was not working and their children, despite their intelligence, were not experiencing success. They did not want to place their children in special programs that serviced more severe social, emotional, and behavioral problems. Their solution was to start a non-profit foundation, whose primary goal was to fund school programs catering to average to above-average intelligence children and adolescents who were not excelling academically, socially, and/or at home. These students do not require a restrictive environment but rather a structured, nurturing environment focusing on academic, social, and cognitive skills.
